

Welcome from Gerry

Welcome to the Aspen News Channel!

When I took the reins as president of Aspen University, I was so impressed by with how personal Aspen University makes the online educational experience. I saw the strong bonds between faculty and students – our staff weren't just teachers, they are mentors and coaches to our students. I noticed students developing lifelong relationships with fellow students around the world. To me, these unique aspects gives online learning a human face and shows that Aspen University is raising the bar as far as the quality of an online education.

The personal nature of an Aspen education is one of many advantages defining your school. The Aspen Voice now allows us the opportunity to build on that advantage by enhancing our already-strong sense of community. It also gives me a forum to communicate directly with you – you'll find my thoughts on a variety of topics here and I encourage you to send me your thoughts and ideas as well. I'll also keep you updated on developments in our curriculum that will enhance your experience even further.

Along with information about Aspen University, we'll keep you updated on the industry trends affecting your career, give you information that will help you in hunting for a job and let you “meet the faculty” through interviews and updates on their activities.

You'll also be able to meet your fellow classmates through interviews with current and graduate students as well as success stories from our alumni.

With the launch of the Aspen Voice, we're opening the doors to the university and letting everyone who is interested look in, see what's happening, and participate in the exciting journey that characterizes an Aspen education. Aspen Voice will be updated frequently so be sure to stay tuned in!
