This past May, LexisNexis® Risk & Information Analytics Group (RIAG) launched LexisNexis® Applicant Screening, a solution that provides timely results for organizations that need easy, efficient and regulatory-compliant background checks.

According to the Society of Human Resource Managers more than 30% of all job applicants provide false information on their resumes. LexisNexis Applicant Screening helps organizations address this problem and limit liabilities by dramatically increasing their knowledge of prospective employees. With LexisNexis Applicant Screening organizations can conduct criminal background searches, check civil records for evidence of past employment-related lawsuits, and verify educational and licensing credentials.

LexisNexis Applicant Screening is a comprehensive solution designed for organizations that require a full menu of background screening options, such as data sharing through XML integration which enables the delivery of screening results through existing human resource software. It offers in-depth verification and analysis of high risk elements like education, employment history, criminal records, drug tests, and fingerprinting coordinated with the organization's job titles, location and decision-making criteria.

"Background screening can be an intimidating and confusing, yet necessary proposition for many companies," said Kim Kerr, Vice-President and General Manager of LexisNexis Risk & Information Analytics Group, Screening Solutions. "By offering a comprehensive, more efficient way to perform necessary background checks, LexisNexis Applicant Screening can help customers ensure better hiring decisions, employee retention and security."
